About the national safeguarding training, learning and development standards

Social Care Wales has been leading on the development of the national safeguarding training, learning and development standards.

Social Care Wales has been leading on the development of the national safeguarding training, learning and development standards.

Social Care Wales has been leading on the development of the national safeguarding training, learning and development standards. The standards have been co-produced by a multi-agency national development group as well as other groups focused on specific aspects of the work.

The standards were developed because there:

- were no multi-agency, national standards for safeguarding training, learning and development in place
- was a lack of consistency in the design, content and provision of safeguarding training, learning and development across organisations in Wales
- was confusion around the appropriate levels of safeguarding training, learning and development for the workforce.

The standards will help organisations make sure:

- they incorporate the standards for practitioners into their safeguarding policies and procedures
- practitioners understand their responsibilities relevant to the group they're in and how to follow the relevant policies and procedures
- all practitioners have access to and comply with the Wales Safeguarding Procedures.

Who are the learning and development standards for?

The training, learning and development standards are relevant to everyone working in:

- local authorities
- social care
- early years and childcare
- health
- police
- education
- probation
- inspectorates
- third and independent sector organisations
- commissioned providers
- agencies or organisations that work with all the above services.

All agencies working together is vital for effective safeguarding and the standards encourage multi-agency learning and development whenever possible.

There is a wealth of knowledge to be gained by being trained alongside multi-agency partners, which can lead to more collaborative working and better outcomes for people. The principles of safeguarding and the values around this are the same for everyone.

Important points to note

The following points will be repeated throughout the standards in the relevant sections.

1. These standards refer to some role examples, but do not identify all roles and responsibilities across the sector. It is incumbent, therefore, on organisations to identify within their own workforce which roles fit into the specific groups.

When determining appropriate training, learning and development for each individual member of staff, the organisation will need to satisfy itself which group each staff member will fit into.

If organisations or managers are unsure of which group is the appropriate one, and the role may straddle more than one group, the expectation is that the practitioner will be trained up to the higher group. For example, if a worker straddles group B and C, then they should be trained at group C level.

2. Throughout the standards, any practitioner commencing in a new role from group B onwards, it is expected that they will have completed training, learning and development in the previous groups prior to commencement in role.

If not, they should be supported to complete the training, learning and development within the first six months of their induction period or within a timeframe agreed with their manager or commissioning organisation.

3. In groups C to E there is an expectation that practitioners will undertake both generic and role specific training, learning and development. The generic section will include training, learning and development that all practitioners in these groups will need to complete regardless of role or organisation.

In addition to the generic training, learning and development, however, the role specific training, learning and development will need to be formally agreed as part of the individual's personal training, learning and development plan and will reflect the specific elements within their role and responsibilities.

The terms we've used

The term 'safeguarding people' includes children, young people up to the age of 18 and adults at risk.

We've used the term 'practitioner' in the standards so they align with the Wales safeguarding procedures.

We've split the standards into six groups (A to F) that reflect the roles and responsibilities of people who may be involved in safeguarding practice.

The multi-agency National Safeguarding Standards Development Group chose the term 'groups' and agreed that the groups will be consistent with the levels noted in the roles and competencies for healthcare staff (children and adults). So Group A, for example, is equivalent to Level 1.

You can find more information about the terms we've used in the glossary.

How the standards have been set out

The purpose of these standards is to make sure everyone in Wales gets consistent and good quality training, learning and development that's relevant to their role and responsibilities, and that we, as practitioners, can safeguard people to the best of our ability.

If a practitioner sits in:

- Group A - this is for everyone. They need to have a basic level of awareness of safeguarding and know how to report a concern

- Group B – this is for people who work directly with people. They should have a higher knowledge of safeguarding, know who to talk to if they notice something is wrong and how to report a concern
- Group C – this is for people who work directly with people and have particular safeguarding responsibilities. They need to be able to respond to safeguarding concerns.

The other groups are:

- Group D – this is mainly for statutory agencies with higher-level decision-making powers
- Group E – this mainly consists of social services personnel in strategic leadership roles, along with their key statutory partners
- Group F – this includes all public sector leaders.

The standards apply to people of all ages, but we appreciate that some practitioners may specialise in working with adults or children. This will be acknowledged in the training, learning and development framework that accompanies these standards.

Safeguarding work can be emotional and hard and therefore the standards highlight the need to support practitioners and promote their well-being.

Without support, practitioners may experience burnout, compassion fatigue, secondary trauma and high stress levels. This can lead to staff sickness, staff leaving their role and a lack of continuity and consistency for the public who are often most at risk.

There are examples of excellent safeguarding practice across Wales, and we encourage sharing good practice. Please visit your Regional Safeguarding Board website for more information on this.

Build of knowledge

The safeguarding training, learning and development standards are written in a way that everybody can see what each practitioner is expected to do when fulfilling their safeguarding duty. Each group of practitioners will have different responsibilities.

Training, learning and development opportunities will match the role of the practitioner so that they are well prepared and skilled to carry out their role. When looking at the standards across the groups, it may look as if they are repeated, however practitioners in different groups will need to have more detailed knowledge and understanding because of the responsibilities they have.

Therefore, the training, learning and development provided for each group will explore the same topics in more depth. Some examples of this are:

- the law and legal framework
- the roles of different agencies and multi-agency working.

It is expected that most practitioners will complete the group A e-learning (or equivalent) at some point in their career. Organisations and managers or employers may set requirements within their organisation for the completion of this module.

Refresher training, learning and development

When practitioners have completed the training, learning and development required for the standards that link to their role, they will continue their safeguarding refresher training, learning and development in line with their role and responsibilities for that group.

For example, a group C practitioner who has completed their core training, learning and development will consider refresher training, learning and development in areas such as child sexual exploitation, Prevent and Deprivation of Liberty Safeguards. They will not be expected to repeat training, learning and development related to groups A and B unless their organisation requires them to do so.

The standards set for group A are essential for all practitioners, in every group. These standards cover the key parts of safeguarding and without this knowledge and understanding, mistakes could be made and people will be at risk.

Practitioners included in group A are required to be aware of safeguarding matters and therefore the standards are set to reflect the minimum level of knowledge and practice required for their role. For example, a group A practitioner will be aware that there is law that safeguards people.

The practitioners in group B will have more responsibility for safeguarding therefore the standards for group B practitioners are set so that the training, learning and development helps them develop a greater understanding of safeguarding matters.

For example, group B practitioners will need to show that they understand the law and put it into practice throughout their day-to-day work.

For group C practitioners, their safeguarding duties are greater and they will have decisions to make about keeping people safe and when they need to put protection processes in place.

These practitioners will need to have all of the knowledge and understanding of the standards in groups A and B plus additional knowledge to make sure they carry out their role in line with the law.

For example, group C practitioners will be able to understand the law and apply it to their day to day safeguarding and protection practice.

Group D practitioners often hold specialist safeguarding roles, either in addition to a main role or as a specialist safeguarding practitioner. They will provide advice and support to colleagues within and outside their team and organisation.

They will need the knowledge and understanding of the standards for groups A to C and also have experience and knowledge of working in more complex situations.

For example, group D practitioners will have a thorough understanding of safeguarding and protection law. They will also support colleagues to apply the law to their practice when making decisions around a person's safety.

Key legislation and guidance

The Social Services and Well-being \(Wales\) Act 2014 came into force on 6 April 2016. The Act provides the legal framework for improving the well-being of people who need care and support. The Act is made up of 11 parts, with Part 7 relating to safeguarding. This legislation provides the framework for the Wales safeguarding procedures.

Accompanying the Act, Welsh Government has published statutory safeguarding guidance, Working Together to Safeguard People.

The Wales safeguarding procedures have been designed to allow frontline practitioners and their managers to apply the legislative requirements and expectations of the Act.

The aim is to improve person-centred outcomes for adults and children at risk of abuse, harm and neglect. The procedures also recognise other relevant legislation, guidance and protocols.

- Children Act 1989
- the Mental Capacity Act 2005 (as amended) – you should make sure the spirit of the Act is embedded in practice for all adults at risk.

Additional legislation and guidance (this is not an exhaustive list)

- Domestic Abuse \(Violence against Women, Domestic Abuse and Sexual Violence \(Wales\) Act 2015
- Domestic Abuse Act 2021
- People must feel they are an equal partner in their relationship with professionals. The Code of Practice under Part 10 of the Social Services and Well-being \(Wales\) Act 2014 sets out how local authorities, in partnership with the person, must decide how advocacy could be used to support the individual to meet their personal outcomes

Social Services and Well-being (Wales) Act principles

The Social Services and Well-being (Wales) Act has five principles:

- voice and control – of the individual
- prevention and early intervention – to prevent escalation of issues
- well-being – of the individuals, to be promoted by everyone carrying out functions under the Act
- co-production – between the person and agencies, across agencies and sectors, co-producing services and solutions
- multi-agency – in this case, safeguarding is everybody’s responsibility.

The principles that underpin safeguarding practice in Wales are:

- safeguarding is everybody's responsibility
- taking a child/person-centred approach at all times.

Safeguarding learning and development standards: memorable principles

For everyone

- Safeguarding is everyone's responsibility

Group A

- I know what the term safeguarding means
- I know what to look out for
- I know who to report to

Group B

- I am a key part of the safeguarding process
- I know when, how and who to report to
- I will make sure the individual's voice is heard

Group C

- I understand that voice and control of people is key to decision making – child/person-centred practice
- I understand everyone's roles and responsibilities in the safeguarding process
- I show the ability to make clear and proportionate decisions

Group D

- I will lead the organisation's safeguarding agenda
- I will make sure that people's voices are heard at each stage of the process
- I will use my knowledge and expertise to enhance safeguarding practice

Group E

- I have strategic oversight on all safeguarding matters within the organisation
- I will aim to ensure that we have sufficient resources to meet the organisation's safeguarding duties
- I will use my knowledge and influence to improve safeguarding practice regionally and nationally

Group F

- I provide leadership that embraces safeguarding in the public sector and promotes multi-agency working at all times
- I understand the core elements of safeguarding and why this is an important area
- I will be guided and provided with assurance by Group E practitioners on areas of concern

The hierarchy of practitioner groups for the national safeguarding training, learning and development standards.

Practitioner groups hierarchy

Any training, learning and development carried out in a higher group will mean there's no need to refresh training, learning and development in the groups below it.

Group F (public service leaders)

Need to complete group A – basic awareness and relevant bespoke training, learning and development such as corporate parenting, but may be called upon to discuss matters or issues at groups A to E.

Group E (consultancy or sector leader)

- Strategic leaders
- Decision makers

Group D (specialist)

- Roles that have specific child and/or adult safeguarding responsibilities, such as safeguarding leads and named professionals.

Group C (advanced)

- Registered or regulated practitioners with an assessing, planning, intervening and evaluating role. They will have a clear protection planning role (core group, case conference, strategy meeting attendees) and have a statutory function.

The third sector will make sure relevant non-statutory roles also have training, learning and development at this level.

Group B (intermediary)

- All practitioners who have regular contact with adults, children and members of the public in their roles. This includes practitioners who are or aren't registered or regulated and volunteers

Group A (basic awareness)

- All staff working in: social care, health care, local authority departments, police, education, early years, the third and voluntary sector (including volunteers) and independent contractors (commissioned services).

Groups summary

There are six safeguarding groups in the national safeguarding training, learning and development standards.

A summary of the safeguarding standards groups.

View this information in a table.

Group A

See group A in detail.

If you see something wrong, or you're worried about something, then you report it.

Group B

See group B in detail.

You have a bit more knowledge in terms of what to look out for and you're building relationships. You get a bit more insight into people's lives, but essentially if you're worried or concerned you report it. You may have a discussion with your line manager or designated safeguarding person or report directly to social services.

Group C

See group C in detail.

You have a role to play beyond reporting and escalating concerns. You are continually assessing how your agency can manage aspects on a preventative basis, is there additional support or services you or others could be providing? Or is this something that has to be elevated up to social services?

Group C practitioners are responding to the concern you're seeing. Deciding if you are able to respond to the safeguarding concern within your own agency or whether you do need that referral to social services.

Group C practitioners may be their agency or team's designated safeguarding person, you may be supporting and advising others, and play an active part in responding to safeguarding concerns arising in your setting.

You need to understand the difference between safeguarding and child or adult protection.

You will also be around the table contributing to strategy meetings and be part of the multi-agency plan for that child or person.

Group D

See group D in detail.

This group is similar to group C, as it still an operational role, but it is a higher decision-making level. A lot of agencies wouldn't necessarily have input at this level, so we're talking mainly about statutory agencies at group D.

These are the people that make really complex decisions about what happens to an individual. Based on safeguarding concerns, do they need to be placed in a secure facility? Do we need to go to court to apply for some kind of order? Do they need a specific type of care and support package in relation to a placement or a setting?

These people would generally be decision makers within their respective organisations in relation to safeguarding.

Group E

See group E in detail.

This group is where those decisions are made that cannot be made at a lower level. For example, when the group D practitioners have to elevate it up to a higher level because it's so unusual, complex, difficult or costly in relation to safeguarding an individual or it involves a number of individuals.

National safeguarding training, learning and development standards - group A

Important points to note

These standards refer to some role examples, but do not identify all roles and responsibilities across the sector. It is incumbent, therefore, on organisations to identify within their own workforce which roles fit into the specific groups.

When determining appropriate training, learning and development for each individual member of staff, the organisation will need to satisfy itself which group each staff member will fit into.

If organisations or managers are unsure of which group is the appropriate one, and the role may straddle more than one group, the expectation is that the practitioner will be trained up to the higher group. For example, if a worker straddles group B and C, then they should be trained at group C level.

Roles and responsibilities

Group A practitioners are all staff who join a public or voluntary sector organisation or agency in Wales. The training, learning and development standards are also suitable for those in private sector settings, volunteers and elected members of local authorities.

The standards aim to give you an understanding about safeguarding and what you must do in cases of actual or potential harm or abuse.

When looking at the standards across the groups, it may look as if they are repeated, however, practitioners in different groups will need to have more detailed knowledge and understanding because of the responsibilities they have.

Therefore, the training, learning and development provided for each group will explore the same topics in more depth. The training, learning and development framework will help to illustrate this.

Practitioners included in group A are required to be aware of safeguarding matters and therefore the standards in this group are set to reflect the minimum level of knowledge and practice required for their role. For example, a group A practitioner will be aware that there is law that safeguards people.

Memorable principles

- I know what the term safeguarding means
- I know what to look out for
- I know who to report to.

Training, learning and development standards (group A)

a) How to work in ways that safeguard people from abuse, harm and neglect.

1. What's meant by the term 'safeguarding'.
2. The main categories of abuse and neglect.
3. Common signs and symptoms associated with abuse, harm and neglect.
4. Other situational risk^[1] areas that may lead to abuse, harm and neglect.
5. Overview of the legal framework and what it means in practice, including an awareness of Part 7 of the Social Services and Well-being (Wales) Act 2014 and their own agency policy.

6. How the legal framework supports people's rights to be protected from abuse, harm and neglect.
7. The roles of different agencies and others involved in safeguarding people's welfare, in the context of the setting.
8. The role and responsibilities of practitioners in safeguarding.
9. Uphold the rights of people, families and carers.

b) The factors, situations and actions that could lead or contribute to abuse, harm or neglect.

1. Why some people could be more at risk from abuse, harm or neglect.
2. How someone's situation can increase the risk of abuse, harm or neglect, for example, adverse childhood experiences.
3. Why abuse may not be disclosed by people, family, friends or practitioners, including volunteers.

c) How to report, respond and record concerns or allegations related to safeguarding.

1. Why it's important to report any concerns about possible abuse, harm or neglect and everyone's duty to do this.
2. How and when to report concerns – have an understanding of your agency or employer's reporting process or mechanisms.
3. What should be reported and recorded.
4. How to respond to suspected, disclosed or alleged harm, abuse or neglect.
5. Actions to take and actions to avoid if harm, abuse or neglect is suspected, disclosed or alleged.
6. Boundaries of confidentiality^[2] in relation to safeguarding and information that must be shared.
7. Potential barriers to reporting or raising concerns.

8. Actions to be taken where there are ongoing concerns about abuse, harm or neglect or where concerns have not been addressed after reporting.
9. What the term 'whistleblowing' means.

[1] Risk areas can include e-safety and domestic abuse

Important points to note

1. These standards refer to some role examples, but do not identify all roles and responsibilities across the sector. It is incumbent, therefore, on organisations to identify within their own workforce which roles fit into the specific groups.

When determining appropriate training for each individual member of staff, the organisation will need to satisfy itself which group each staff member will fit into.

2. Throughout the standards, for any practitioner commencing in a new role from group B onwards, it is expected that they will have completed training in the previous groups prior to commencement in role. If not, they should be supported to complete the training within the first 6 months of their induction period.

Roles and responsibilities

Group B practitioners are those who spend time with people in a group setting or on a one-to-one basis. They will have a particular responsibility in relation to the people they work with and will need a higher level of knowledge than those in group A because of their direct involvement with people. The people they work with may or may not have safeguarding concerns.

If there are safeguarding concerns, there will be a clear line of reporting in the organisation and the practitioner will be aware of their responsibility to report concerns, both internally and to social services directly.

These practitioners won't have a statutory role in relation to the safeguarding process and wouldn't sit on core groups or be part of protection planning. They wouldn't be expected to give safeguarding advice to others.

When looking at the standards across the groups, it may look as if they are repeated, however, practitioners in different groups will need to have more detailed knowledge and understanding because of the responsibilities they have.

Therefore, the training provided for each group will explore the same topics in more depth. The training, learning and development framework will help to illustrate this.

The practitioners in group B will have more responsibility for safeguarding therefore the standards for group B practitioners are set so that the training helps them develop a greater understanding of safeguarding matters. For example, group B practitioners will need to show that they understand the law and put it into practice throughout their day-to-day work.

Memorable principles

- I am a key part of the safeguarding process
- I know when, how and who to report to
- I will make sure the individual's voice is heard.

Training, learning and development standards (group B)

Everyone in this group will also need to know everything in group A.

a) Legislation, national policies, and codes of conduct and professional practice in relation to safeguarding.

1. The categories of abuse and neglect as defined in Section 197 of the Social Services and Well-being (Wales) Act 2014.
2. Common signs and symptoms associated with abuse, harm and neglect.
3. Other situational risk areas that may lead to abuse, harm and neglect.
4. Overview of the legal framework and what these mean in practice, to include local and national policy and principles, Children Act, Mental Capacity Act, Domestic Abuse legislation and the United Nations principles (older people) and conventions (children) and European Convention on Human Rights.
5. How the legal framework supports people's rights to be protected from abuse, harm and neglect.
6. The roles of different agencies and others involved in safeguarding people's welfare, in the context of your setting.
7. Legislation[1], statutory guidance, national policies and codes of conduct and professional practice that relate to the safeguarding of people – both adults and children and young people – and what these mean in practice.
8. How legislative frameworks support people's rights to be protected from abuse, harm and neglect.
9. Being open and honest with people if things go wrong[2] or had the potential to go wrong.

b) How to work in ways that safeguard people from abuse, harm and neglect.

1. The roles of different agencies and others involved in safeguarding people's welfare, in the context of your setting.

2. The role and responsibilities of practitioners in safeguarding.
3. The role of advocacy in relation to safeguarding – externally and in relation to your role.
4. How to establish relationships that support trust and rapport with people, families and carers.
5. How to work in a person/child-centred way to follow the safeguarding principles while upholding the rights of people.
6. How to enable people to make decisions about what matters to them and stay in control of their lives.
7. How to promote people's voice at all times, listening to their lived experience
8. How to support people to balance their rights and responsibilities, while making sure you uphold your duty of care.
9. How to promote an environment where people can express fears, anxieties, feelings and concerns without worry of ridicule, rejection, retribution or not being believed.
10. How to make people aware of how to keep themselves safe from abuse, harm and neglect.
11. How to make people aware of the risks associated with using social media, the internet and mobile phones.
12. How to work in ways that keep practitioners and people safe from abuse, harm or neglect.
13. How to access support and training to think about and improve safeguarding knowledge, skills and practice.
14. Know where to go for advice and support, if needed.

c) The factors, situations and actions that could lead or contribute to abuse, harm or neglect.

1. Why some people could be more at risk from abuse, harm or neglect.
2. How someone's situation can increase the risk of abuse, harm or neglect, for example, adverse childhood experiences.

3. Why people, family, friends, practitioners and volunteers may not disclose abuse.
4. Actions, behaviours or situations that increase the risk of abuse, harm or neglect.
5. Features of perpetrator behaviour and grooming, including bullying, coercive control and controlling behaviour.
6. Learning from reviews and reports into serious failures to protect people from abuse, harm or neglect.

d) How to report, respond and record concerns or allegations related to safeguarding.

1. The importance of reporting any concerns about possible abuse, harm or neglect and everyone's duty to do this.
2. How and when to report any concerns about alleged abuse, harm or neglect.
3. How to respond if abuse, harm or neglect is suspected or alleged.
4. Actions to be taken where there are ongoing concerns about abuse, harm or neglect or where concerns haven't been addressed after reporting.
5. What should be reported and recorded, when this should happen and how this information is stored.
6. How to record written information that's accurate, clear and relevant with an appropriate level of detail.
7. The difference between fact, opinion and judgement, and why understanding this is important when recording and reporting information.
8. Confidential boundaries in relation to safeguarding and information that must be shared.
9. Potential barriers to reporting or raising concerns and how to address them.
10. Know what the term 'whistleblowing' means and how to follow your organisation's whistleblowing policy.

[1] Social Services and Well-being (Wales) Act 2014, Mental Capacity Act 2005 and Children's Act 1989.

[2] Duty of candour: Understand the need to be accountable for your own work. This includes being open and honest with people if things go wrong, including providing a full and prompt explanation to the employer or the appropriate authority of what has happened.

National safeguarding training, learning and development standards - group C

First published: 19 October 2022

Last updated: 2 October 2023

Go to <https://socialcare.wales/resources-guidance/safeguarding-list/national-safeguarding-training-learning-and-development-standards/safeguarding-standards-group-c> for the latest version.

Important points to note

1. These standards refer to some role examples, but do not identify all roles and responsibilities across the sector. It is incumbent, therefore, on organisations to identify within their own workforce which roles fit into the specific groups. When determining appropriate training for each individual member of staff, the organisation will need to satisfy itself which group each staff member will fit into. If organisations or managers are unsure of which group is the appropriate one, and the role may straddle more than one group, the expectation is that the practitioner will be trained up to the higher group, for example if a worker straddles group B and C, then they should be trained at group C level.
2. Throughout the standards, any practitioner commencing in a new role from group B onwards, it is expected that they will have completed training in the previous groups prior to commencement in role. If not, they should be supported to complete the training within the first six months of their induction period.
3. In groups C to E there is an expectation that practitioners will undertake both generic and role specific training. The generic section will include training that all practitioners in these groups will need to complete regardless of role or organisation. In addition to the generic training, however, the role specific training will need to be formally agreed as part of the individual's personal training and development plan and will reflect the specific elements within their role and responsibilities.

Roles and responsibilities

Group C practitioners are those who have direct responsibility for safeguarding people:

- who have an assessing role that's linked to the safeguarding process and / or
- who are operating at a level where they can give advice about safeguarding to those in group A and group B and / or
- in a setting they work in or manage and / or
- with whom they spend a lot of time unsupervised and there may be safeguarding concerns.

Group C practitioners also include an organisation's designated safeguarding person and people who take a more prominent role in safeguarding decisions, including those with an active role in core groups and protection planning activities.

Group C practitioners could potentially contribute to or are fully engaged in assessing, planning, intervening and reviewing the needs of people where there are safeguarding concerns.

The National Safeguarding Learning and Development Framework gives details about training for group C practitioners. The framework acknowledges that practitioners in this group may hold additional specific safeguarding responsibilities for their role. For some practitioners, their regulatory / professional body may define the training required for the role.

When looking at the standards across the groups, it may look as if they are repeated, however, practitioners in different groups will need to have more detailed knowledge and understanding because of the responsibilities they have. Therefore, the training provided for each group will explore the same topics in more depth. The learning and development framework will help to illustrate this.

For group C practitioners, their safeguarding duties are greater and they will have decisions to make about keeping people safe and when they need to put protection processes in place. These practitioners will need to have all of the knowledge and understanding of the standards in groups A and B plus additional knowledge to make sure they carry out their role in line with the law. For example, group C practitioners will be able to understand the law and apply it to their day to day safeguarding and protection practice.

There is generic group C safeguarding training that everyone in group C must do.

Additional training that is relevant to a practitioners' specific roles and responsibilities will be needed following completion of the generic group C training.

This will be different for individual practitioners even within agencies and organisations, for example within health some paediatricians within group C will require specialist training, learning and development in undertaking and reporting on child protection medicals. This specialist training, learning and development will often be defined and required by professional and/or regulatory bodies and will be defined at a national or agency level. There may also be local agreements for specific training, learning and development requirements.

Memorable principles:

- I understand that giving people voice and control is an essential part of decision making - child/person-centred practice
- I understand everyone's roles and responsibilities in the safeguarding process
- I have the ability to make clear and proportionate decisions.

Training, learning and development standards (group C)

(Equivalent to Level 3 in health)

Everyone in this group will need to know everything in groups A and B.

a) Legislation, national policies and codes of conduct and professional practice in relation to safeguarding.

1. Legislation, statutory guidance, national policies and codes of conduct and professional practice that relate to the safeguarding of people – both adults and children and young people – and what these mean in practice. Refer to the whole list of legislation within the introduction section
2. Knowledge and practical application of the Mental Capacity Act 2005 in the safeguarding context (five statutory principles), where applicable.
3. Effectively apply the two-stage capacity test^[1], that is, the test specific to a person's retention and understanding of the safeguarding event, where applicable
4. How safeguarding practice is affected by laws, national and local guidance, and organisational policies.
5. How legislative frameworks support people's right to be protected from abuse, harm and neglect.
6. The role of different agencies and other practitioners involved in safeguarding.
7. Being open and honest with people if things go wrong³ or had the potential to go wrong.

b) How to work in ways that safeguard people from abuse, harm and neglect.

1. The specific role and responsibilities of practitioners in relation to the child protection or adult protection process.
2. The different types of advocacy and how they apply to the safeguarding process.
3. Build relationships that support trust with people, families and carers, and making sure strengths and risks are given equal weight in the safeguarding process.
4. Promoting the person's voice and control is clearly shown throughout the stages.
5. Allow people to make decisions about what matters to them and stay in control of their lives as far as possible, including explaining decisions they don't like or don't agree with.
6. Uphold the rights of people, families and carers, while making sure you uphold your duty of care, and an understanding of why some rights are given more importance than others in the safeguarding process.
7. How to support people to balance their rights and responsibilities while making sure you uphold your duty of care, making sure that risk averse practice doesn't limit a person's ability to enjoy life.
8. Enable people to feel safe and confident to share their worries, concerns and feelings by providing a safe space and consistent messaging.
9. Raise a person's awareness of how to keep themselves safe from abuse, harm and neglect by giving them tailored and relevant information.
10. Raise a person's awareness of the risks associated with using social media, the internet and mobile phones, using appropriate ways of explaining those risks.
11. Work in ways that keep you and others safe from abuse, harm or neglect, including lone working.
12. Use supervision and support networks to reflect on your safeguarding practice, skills and competence, and your understanding of the strengths and risks of each person / family you're working with, including their daily lived experience.

13. Knowing where to go for advice and support if needed, including directly from social services.

c) The factors, situations and actions that could lead or contribute to abuse, harm or neglect.

1. Why some people could be more at risk from abuse, harm or neglect.
2. How a person's situation can increase the risk of abuse, harm or neglect, for example, adverse childhood experiences.
3. Why people may not tell others they have witnessed or experienced abuse, harm or neglect.
4. Actions, behaviours or situations that increase the risk of abuse, harm or neglect.
5. A person's capacity and their understanding of the risk of abuse, harm or neglect
6. The effects of parent or carer behaviour and family factors on adults and children at risk of abuse, harm or neglect^[2].
7. Features of perpetrator behaviour and grooming including bullying, coercive control and controlling behaviour.
8. Learning from practice reviews and reports into serious failures to protect people from harm, abuse or neglect.

d) How to report, respond and record concerns or allegations related to safeguarding.

1. Accurately and confidently report any concerns about possible abuse, harm or neglect and everyone's duty to do this.
2. Recognise how and when to report any concerns about alleged abuse, harm or neglect and to advise others accordingly.

3. Actions to take and actions to avoid if abuse, harm or neglect is suspected, disclosed or alleged.
4. Able to escalate and act where there are ongoing concerns about harm, abuse or neglect, or where concerns have not been addressed after reporting.
5. Able to report and record effectively and know when this should happen and how information is stored.
6. How to record written information that's accurate, clear and relevant with an appropriate level of detail.
7. The difference between fact, opinion and judgement, and why understanding this is important when recording and reporting information.
8. Understand confidential boundaries in relation to safeguarding.
9. Understand the importance of lawful and proportionate information sharing.
10. Know what the term 'whistleblowing' means and how to apply your organisation's 'whistleblowing' policy effectively.

Promote the safeguarding of people

e) Promote child / person-centred practice.

1. Support a culture of being inclusive and strengths based.
2. Recognise the impact of a family's cultural and religious background when assessing risk and managing concerns.
3. Work with the person, those close to them and relevant practitioners to develop a protection plan.
4. Assess the person's capacity to make decisions about risk, while balancing their rights and responsibilities.
5. Carry out, contribute to and / or support inter-agency assessments or enquiries, including gathering the person's views about risks and risk management and referring to other agencies when appropriate.
6. Analyse the outcome of an enquiry, the degree of risk to a person, their immediate or extended network, or to the community[3].

7. Discuss the situation with the person or child, recording their wishes and views.
8. Contribute to and / or co-ordinate protection planning, resolution and recovery in an outcome-focused way.
9. Make safe transition arrangements at key life stages when you're considering positive outcomes with people[4].
10. Follow and review procedures for proactively following up children and young people or adults who are 'not brought' to appointments or not collected from venues, and / or who are not allowed access to home visits.

f) Take part in safeguarding processes.

1. Take part in child or adult practice reviews, domestic / mental health / offensive weapon homicide reviews, in future, to be taken forward as the Single Unified Safeguarding Review [5] and any case management reviews, when required.
2. Present information appropriately at meetings and in written reports in accordance with the legal requirements.
3. Understand processes for identifying if an adult, child or young person is known to professionals in social care and other agencies.
4. Understand your organisation's frameworks and assessment processes that underpin strengths-based practice.
5. Understand and contribute to measuring the effectiveness and quality of services.
6. Know how to manage and monitor allegations of abuse against practitioners in a position of trust, including escalation and seeking help.

g) Support others to safeguard people (for those with supervisory responsibility).

1. Support others to carry out their safeguarding duties.
2. Know when to seek and offer support in a positive working environment.

3. Understand the potential personal impact of safeguarding or child protection work on yourself and others.
4. Create and support a working environment that allows people to develop skills and knowledge in safeguarding.
5. Carry out supervision and provide support for other staff and peers.
6. Advise others about appropriate information sharing.

h) Work with others to safeguard people.

1. Work with others to proactively reduce the risk of abuse, harm or neglect.
2. Identify risks and contribute to risk assessments.
3. Work with everyone involved, where there are safeguarding concerns, and use considered judgements to manage risks and promote safety.
4. Recognise and use sensitively and responsibly, the power that comes from working with people and carers.
5. Know when to liaise with other agencies about the assessment and management of safeguarding planning.
6. Highlight resource or operational difficulties that might get in the way of the provision of safe care and support.
7. Able to take part and / or chair peer review and multidisciplinary meetings as needed.
8. Recognise when to get support and help in situations that need more expertise and experience.

i) Maintain professional accountability.

1. Understand the purpose and process of Child Practice Reviews or Adult Practice Reviews, Domestic Homicide Reviews, Mental Health Homicide Reviews and Offensive Weapons Homicide Reviews (These reviews will all become part of the Single Unified Safeguarding Review)
2. Carry out regular documented reviews of your (and/or your team's) safeguarding practice.

3. Apply the lessons learned from audits, practice reviews, domestic homicide reviews and case management reviews to improve practice.
4. Understand information sharing, confidentiality and consent.
5. Be aware of the role and remit of the regional safeguarding boards.
6. Understand the links between safeguarding and the criminal justice system.
7. Understand the role of different types of witnesses.
8. Understand the principles of effective safeguarding supervision and peer support.
9. Understand national and local frameworks for the assessment of risk and harm.
10. Keep your awareness of the range of resources and services available to support families up to date.

j) Standards that are specific to practitioners who provide substantial services to children and young people.

1. Understand the processes and legislation for children looked after, including services for care experienced children, as appropriate to your role.
2. Understand the use of chaperones[\[6\]](#).
3. Understand the management of the Public Health Wales Procedural Response to Unexpected Deaths in Childhood (PRUDIC[\[7\]](#)) process for the unexpected death of a child or young person.
4. Understand fabricated or induced illness.
5. Consent and confidentiality in relation to young people under the age of 16, including the concepts of Gillick Competency and Fraser Guidelines.

k) Standards that are specific to practitioners who provide substantial services to adults.

1. Explains the management of the death of an adult in a safeguarding context.
2. Understand the principles of consent and confidentiality in relation to adults.
3. Effectively apply the two-stage capacity test, that is the test that's specific to the person's retention and understanding of the safeguarding event.

[1] The Mental Capacity Act (MCA) applies to people aged 16 and over

[2] Parent or carer behaviour and family factors can include substance misuse, domestic abuse, stress and disguised compliance.

[3] The degree of risk to the community is considered with regard to the interests of public safety.

[4] Transition applies to any period in a person's life where changes happen that may affect their care and support needs. There may also be additional safeguarding considerations.

[5] Single Unified Safeguarding Review is currently being developed by Welsh Government and will aim to replace all current reviews, specifically Adult Practice Reviews, Child Practice Reviews, Domestic Homicide Reviews, Mental Health Homicide Reviews and Offensive Weapons Homicide Reviews (OWHR). The OWHR is being developed by the Home Office in consultation with Welsh Government. The Single Unified Safeguarding Review is being developed to conduct one review against a single incident which will meet the requirements of each individual review

[6] Chaperones: See Glossary

[7] The PRUDiC applies to all unexpected deaths in children from birth until their 18th birthday, whether from natural, unnatural, known or unknown causes, at home, in hospital or in the community. This includes road traffic collisions, apparent suicides and murders. This does not include stillbirths and the death of pre-viable babies born before 24 weeks. Public Health Wales

In addition to the generic training, however, the role specific training will need to be formally agreed as part of the individual's personal training and development plan and will reflect the specific elements within their role and responsibilities.

Roles and responsibilities

Group D practitioners are those who operate at a higher level in the safeguarding process. They give advice, guidance and supervision (if applicable) to group C practitioners. They can make higher level decisions, such as if to apply for court orders.

Group D practitioners would:

- be expected to have a high level of knowledge and expertise in their area in relation to safeguarding
- be expected to contribute to and chair safeguarding reviews when needed
- be able to advise partner agencies about safeguarding matters and understand the importance of multi-agency working
- be able to justify their decision-making using legislation, process and procedures
- be aware of the importance of child / person-centred practice and the positive impact it can have on the safeguarding process
- make sure the person's voice and control is heard in the decision-making process, where possible, and would make sure the group C practitioners in their service area worked in this way.

Group D practitioners often hold specialist safeguarding roles, either in addition to a main role or as a specialist safeguarding practitioner. They will provide advice and support to colleagues within and outside their team and organisation. They will need the knowledge and understanding of the standards for groups A to C and also have experience and knowledge of working in more complex situations. For example, group D practitioners will have a thorough understanding of safeguarding and protection law. They will also support colleagues to apply the law to their practice when making decisions around a person's safety.

Memorable principles:

- I will lead the organisation's safeguarding agenda
- I will make sure people's voices are heard at each stage of the process
- I will use my knowledge and expertise to enhance safeguarding practice.

Training, learning and development standards (group D)

Everyone in group D will also need to know everything in groups A to C.

a) How to work in ways that safeguard people from abuse, harm and neglect.

1. Understand the specific role and responsibilities of practitioners in relation to the child or adult at risk process when there's a need for escalation.
2. Understand the different types of advocacy and how they apply to the safeguarding process and the decision making needed at this level.
3. Understand all legislation relevant to safeguarding as listed within the introduction section to the Standards.
4. Ensure there's a supportive culture for building relationships that create trust with people, families and carers and making sure strengths and risks are given equal weight in the safeguarding process.
5. Ensure the person's voice and control is clear to see at each stage of their involvement.
6. Ensure your workforce is encouraged to enable people to make decisions about what matters to them and stay in control of their lives as far as possible, including explaining decisions they don't like or don't agree with.

Promote the safeguarding of people

b) Promote child / person-centred practice.

1. Be responsible for promoting a culture of being inclusive and strengths based.
2. Make sure staff are trained to recognise the impact of a family's ethnic, cultural and religious background when assessing risk and managing concerns.
3. Make sure staff are trained to assess the person's capacity to make decisions about risk, while balancing their rights and responsibilities.
4. Make sure your workforce is supported to carry out, contribute to and support inter-agency assessments or enquiries, including getting the person's views about risks and risk management, and referring to other agencies when appropriate.

c) Participate in safeguarding processes.

1. Consider other multi-agency frameworks and assessment processes that underpin outcome-focused practice.
2. Lead your organisation's understanding and contribution to measuring the effectiveness and quality of services.
3. Contribute to or lead on the development and updating of internal and regional safeguarding policies, procedures and protocols.
4. Ensure correct procedures are in place and advise others about the need for information sharing in line with legislation.
5. Understand the referral process and pathways at all levels.

d) Support others to safeguard people.

1. Ensure your managers and partners are supported to help others to carry out their safeguarding duties.
2. Ensure you promote a supportive environment and that your staff know when to seek and offer support.

3. Ensure the workforce are aware of the emotional impact safeguarding may have, and where and when to seek help.
4. Ensure your workforce is aware of how to manage and monitor allegations of abuse against practitioners in a position of trust, including escalation and seeking help.
5. Support staff to be able to present information appropriately at meetings and in written reports, in accordance with the legal requirements.
6. Create and support a working environment that allows people to develop skills and knowledge in safeguarding.
7. Complete or undertake supervision of group C practitioners and provide support for other staff and peers.
8. Ensure your workforce understands the processes for identifying if an adult, child or young person is known to professionals in social care and other agencies.

e) Work with others to safeguard people.

1. Identify and contribute to decisions that discuss high risk people, such as Multi-Agency Public Protection Arrangements (MAPPA).
2. Where there are safeguarding concerns work with colleagues and other agencies to safeguard adults and children at risk.
3. Ensure your managers and group C practitioners know when to liaise with other agencies about the assessment and management of safeguarding planning.
4. Work to resolve and escalate resource or operational difficulties that may affect the provision of safe care and support.
5. Deal with an insufficient response from organisations or agencies.
6. Be able to escalate matters via the Dispute resolution protocols when necessary.
7. Participate in and chair peer review and multi-disciplinary meetings as needed.

8. Be able to get support and help in situations that need more expertise and experience.
9. Be able to advise colleagues about approved local, regional and national guidance, policy and procedures.
10. Help with learning opportunities and providing updates.
11. Comply with the duty to co-operate^[1] (if applicable).

f) Maintain professional accountability.

1. Understand the purpose and process of chairing child or adult practice reviews, homicide reviews and Single Unified Safeguarding Reviews (SUSR).
2. Analyse regular documented reviews of your own (and / or your team's) safeguarding practice.
3. Embed the principles of effective safeguarding supervision and peer support.
4. Influence local, regional and national frameworks for the assessment of risk and harm.
5. Lead on applying the core values and principles of safeguarding across the organisation.

1. These standards refer to some role examples, but do not identify all roles and responsibilities across the sector. It is incumbent, therefore, on organisations to identify within their own workforce which roles fit into the specific groups. When determining appropriate training for each individual member of staff, the organisation will need to satisfy itself which group each staff member will fit into. 2. Throughout the standards, any practitioner commencing in a new role from group B onwards, it is expected that they will have completed training in the previous groups prior to commencement in role. If not, they should be supported to complete the training within the first six months of their induction period.
3. In groups C to E there is an expectation that practitioners will undertake both generic and role specific training. The generic section will include training that all practitioners in these groups will need to complete regardless of role or organisation. In addition to the generic training, however, the role specific training will need to be formally agreed as part of the individual's personal training and development plan and will reflect the specific elements within their role and responsibilities.

Roles and responsibilities

The roles in group E are those who have the 'final decision or say' about safeguarding decisions during the safeguarding process. They can advise about high level, complex situations and 'make a call' about any safeguarding decisions that need to be made.

Certain decisions in the safeguarding process can't be made below this level. These include the higher levels of care and support packages (placements) that are sometimes needed because of safeguarding concerns. Some agencies may not have people that operate at this level because of the high level of expertise, knowledge and decision-making powers - directly relating to the safeguarding process - needed.

The people who operate at this level would also advise other agencies on their area of expertise and would be able to lead regional or Wales and UK National safeguarding work in this area. They would routinely be involved in regional or national groups that look at safeguarding issues, including national initiatives and complex reviews.

Group E practitioners wouldn't necessarily be the people at the highest levels in organisations, as these may be in group F (which would consist of elected members, board members and chief executives). The people in group F have higher decision-making powers in general but wouldn't get involved in the details of the safeguarding process and making decisions in relation to this process. They may not also have the knowledge needed to give specialist advice and guidance about safeguarding matters.

Memorable principles:

- I have strategic oversight of every safeguarding matter in the organisation
- I will aim to make sure we have enough resources to meet the organisation's safeguarding duties

- I will use my knowledge and influence to improve safeguarding practice regionally and nationally.

Group E: Specialist roles or sector leaders

a) Core competencies (sector leaders).

People may carry out these tasks or may delegate to others and will have oversight and accountability of, and for, the work.

1. As set out in groups A to D.
2. Provide support and make sure you contribute to safeguarding appraisal and provide appropriate oversight for safeguarding across the organisation.
3. Ensure staff across the organisation have access to the necessary safeguarding training and development opportunities, and there's protected time for learning. Be assured that evaluation and monitoring is taking place linked to findings and recommendations from practice reviews.
4. Promote the ideal that all safeguarding training is multi-agency, wherever possible, from group B upwards.
5. Be accountable for safeguarding quality assurance and improvement to make sure there are robust processes and to bring about innovation and change to improve safeguarding across the organisation.
6. Take a strategic and professional lead across the organisation on all aspects of safeguarding.

b) Core competencies (specialist roles).

1. Continue to maintain your skills and expertise in your specific field of knowledge to support the safeguarding process.
2. Give strategic and expert advice and guidance, with the aim of continually improving the quality of safeguarding activity to improve outcomes for those identified as having safeguarding concerns.

3. Providing specialist advice and guidance to, and managing the expectations of, commissioner organisations' boards and executives on all matters relating to safeguarding, including regulation and inspection.
4. Give strategic and expert advice to service planners and commissioners, making sure all services that are commissioned meet the statutory requirement to safeguard and promote the welfare of people.

Knowledge, skills, attitudes and values

Group E practitioners should have the knowledge, skills, attitudes and values set out in groups A to D.

c) Knowledge.

1. An in-depth knowledge of relevant Wales and UK national and international policies and implications for practice.
2. Understand all legislation relevant to safeguarding as listed within the Introduction section.
3. Know when legal advice is needed in relation to court matters and be able to use this advice to decide on a course of action, if needed.
4. Lead the implementation of national guidelines and audit the effectiveness and quality of services across the organisation against quality standards.
5. Robust awareness of different specialties and professional roles within your organisation and other agencies.

d) Skills.

1. Lead (or delegate) the organisation's contribution to a safeguarding review (such as child practice reviews, adult practice reviews or domestic homicide reviews), drawing conclusions and developing an agreed action plan to address the lessons learned.

2. Lead and collaborate with colleagues in local, regional and national safeguarding networks.
3. Give supervision, appraisal and support for group D practitioners.
4. Lead (or delegate) multi-disciplinary team reviews.
5. Evaluate and update local procedures and policies in light of relevant Wales and UK national and international issues and developments.
6. Reconcile differences of opinion among staff in your organisation and other agencies, including acting if a complaint is received from a partner agency about safeguarding practice.
7. Proactively deal with strategic communications and the media (if needed by their role) on safeguarding across the organisation.
8. Lead on, analyse and delegate robust safeguarding population-based needs assessments that establish current and future service requirements across the organisation.
9. Influence decisions around service investment challenges and opportunities to safeguard people and present an evidence-base to executive officers.
10. Give high-level strategic presentations to influence organisational development.
11. Work in partnership on strategic projects with senior officers and safeguarding colleagues locally, regionally and nationally.

e) Attitudes and values.

As set out in groups A to D.

Important points to note

1. These standards refer to some role examples, but do not identify all roles and responsibilities across the sector. It is incumbent, therefore, on organisations to identify within their own workforce which roles fit into the specific groups.

When determining appropriate training for each individual member of staff, the organisation will need to satisfy itself which group each staff member will fit into.

If organisations or managers are unsure of which group is the appropriate one, and the role may straddle more than one group, the expectation is that the practitioner will be trained up to the higher group, for example if a worker straddles group B and C, then they should be trained at group C level.

2. Throughout the standards, any practitioner commencing in a new role from group B onwards, it is expected that they will have completed training in the previous groups prior to commencement in role. If not, they should be supported to complete the training within the first six months of their induction period.

Roles and responsibilities

Group F practitioners are the most senior people in an organisation. One person in any public sector organisation will be ultimately responsible for safeguarding. This would normally be about corporate safeguarding and this is not the same as being the highest decision maker in the safeguarding process (as set out here). All group F practitioners should have access to safeguarding advice and expertise from designated or named professionals.

Group F practitioners don't need the same in-depth knowledge of safeguarding as group E practitioners because they don't necessarily need to have the same level of expertise and skills. But they do need to have the basic awareness of safeguarding covered in group A. They will also need to complete relevant ad-hoc training, such as the Violence Against Women Domestic Abuse and Sexual Violence (VAWDASV) and Single Unified Safeguarding Review that's aimed at this group.

Memorable principles:

- I provide leadership that embraces safeguarding in the public sector and promotes multi-agency working at all times
- I understand the core elements of safeguarding and why this is an important area
- I will be guided and provided with assurance by group E practitioners on areas of concern.

Group F: Specialist roles and sector leaders (Equivalent to Level 5 in health)

a) Core competencies.

1. As set out in group A.
2. Ensure the organisation meets relevant Wales and UK national guidance and standards for safeguarding.
3. Promote a positive culture of safeguarding, including making sure there are procedures for safer staff recruitment, whistleblowing, appropriate policies for safeguarding (including regular updating) and that staff and the public are aware the organisation takes safeguarding seriously and will respond to concerns about people's welfare.

4. Appoint an executive director lead for safeguarding.
5. Ensure good safeguarding and protection practice is happening throughout the organisation.
6. Ensure operational services are resourced to support and respond to the demands of safeguarding effectively.
7. Ensure an effective safeguarding training and supervision strategy is resourced and provided.
8. Ensure and promote appropriate, safe, multi-agency partnership working practices and make sure information sharing practices happen within the organisation.
9. Ensure there are robust governance processes in place to provide assurance about safeguarding.
10. Ensure child and adult safeguarding policies and procedures work effectively together.

b) Knowledge, skills, attitudes and values.

1. Understand the corporate parenting role and responsibilities for their organisation.
2. Understand the potential causes and consequences of gross negligence.
3. Understand the agencies involved in safeguarding and protection, their roles and responsibilities, and the importance of multi-agency co-operation.
4. Understand about the statutory obligations to work with the regional safeguarding board and other safeguarding agencies, including the voluntary sector.
5. Understand the ethical, legal and professional obligations around information sharing related to safeguarding and protection.
6. Understand the statutory obligation to be involved, take part in and implement the learning from practice reviews, domestic homicide reviews and other review processes, such as the procedural response to unexpected deaths in children (PRUDIC).

7. Understand about the need to provide and comply with staff training in commissioning and provider organisations and that this is an organisational necessity.
8. Understand about the importance of safeguarding and protection policies for personnel, including the use of vetting and barring and safe recruitment. Be aware of the need to keep them up to date and to review them at regular intervals to make sure they continue to meet the organisation's needs.
9. Understand about the regulation and inspection processes and the implications for the organisation if the standards aren't met by commissioners or providers.
10. Understand the importance of regular reporting and monitoring of safeguarding arrangements within provider organisations.
11. Understand the board level risk relating to safeguarding and the need to have arrangements in place for rapid notification and action for serious incidents, including reporting duties to the police in accordance with current legislation.
12. Understand and be aware the board needs to have access to appropriate specialist advice about safeguarding and protection matters from designated professionals.

Glossary

Glossary of terms for the National safeguarding training, learning and development standards

First published: 20 October 2022

Last updated: 2 October 2023

This document was downloaded from socialcare.wales and may not be the latest version.

Go to <https://socialcare.wales/resources-guidance/safeguarding-list/national-safeguarding-training-learning-and-development-standards/safeguarding-standards-glossary> for the latest version.

We've made every effort to use the same terms in the National safeguarding training, learning and development standards as the Wales Safeguarding Procedures. You can find more information about these terms in the Wales Safeguarding Procedures' glossary.

We've also highlighted other terms used in the standards to explain them in more detail here:

Adverse Childhood Experiences: These are traumatic events, particularly those in early childhood that significantly affect people's health and well-being.

These experiences range from suffering verbal, mental, sexual and physical abuse, to being raised in a household where domestic abuse, alcohol abuse, parental separation or drug abuse is present.

Chaperone: A chaperone looks after a child(ren) in their care during performances and other activities. They are approved by a local authority where a parent or teacher can't accompany a child.

A formal chaperone is an appropriately trained person whose role is to observe examinations or procedures carried out by health practitioners. Chaperones are present to support and protect patients and healthcare practitioners.

Coercive control: Coercive control is when a person with whom you are personally connected with, repeatedly behaves in a way which makes you feel controlled, dependent, isolated, humiliated or scared.

Confidentiality:

Someone's safety and welfare takes precedence over the need to maintain professional confidentiality. The practitioner should make the nature and purpose of the request clear, and record the request and response in writing.

“Practitioners must share information in accordance with the Data Protection Act 1998 and the common law duty of confidentiality. Both allow for the sharing of information and should not be automatically used as a reason for not doing so. In exceptional circumstances, personal information can be lawfully shared without consent where there is a legal requirement or the professional deems it to be in the public interest. One of the exceptional circumstances is in order to prevent abuse or serious harm to others.” Working Together to Safeguard People - Volume 1

As long as you can stand by what you’ve done and justify that it was in the child or person’s best interests then that is the correct thing to do. Bear in mind, lack of information sharing is a recurring theme over the last decade in both child and adult practice reviews.

Duty of candour: Understand the need to be accountable for your own work. This includes being open and honest with people if things go wrong, including giving a full and prompt explanation to your employer, or the appropriate authority, of what’s happened. The Health and Social Care \(Quality and Engagement\) \(Wales\) Act 2020 sets out the duty for an NHS body.

Duty of care:

- Always act in the individual and others’ best interests
- Don’t act, or fail to act, in a way that results in harm
- Act within your competence and escalate if unsure.

Fabricated or induced illness: This happens when a parent or carer exaggerates or deliberately causes symptoms of illness in a child. The parent or carer will try to convince professionals or others that their child is ill or that their condition is worse than it really is.

The parent or carer doesn’t necessarily intend to deceive, but their behaviour is likely to harm the child. For example, the child may have unnecessary treatment or tests, be made to believe they're ill or have their education disrupted.

Fraser guidelines: Gillick competency and Fraser guidelines refer to a legal case which looked specifically at whether doctors should be able to give contraceptive advice or treatment to under 16-year olds without parental consent. But since then, they have been more widely used to help assess whether a child has the maturity to make their own decisions and to understand the implications of those decisions.

Other examples of safeguarding frameworks:

- Multi-Agency Risk Assessment Conference \(MARAC\)
- Multi-Agency Public Protection Arrangements \(MAPPA\)
- Female Genital Mutilation \(FGM\) Duty
- Contextual Safeguarding
- Prevent duty guidance

Parent or carer behaviour and family factors: These can include substance misuse, domestic abuse, stress, disguised compliance and mental health.

Perpetrator: A person who carries out a harmful, illegal or immoral act. You can find examples of perpetrator behaviour in the Wales Safeguarding Procedures.

Practice review: Safeguarding practice reviews are carried out on behalf of the regional safeguarding boards. They are a way for all partner agencies to identify the lessons that can be learned from particularly complex or difficult cases and to put changes in place to improve services in light of these lessons.

The purpose of the review system is to promote a positive culture of multi-agency learning and best practice.

PRUDIC (Procedural Response to Unexpected Deaths in Childhood): This procedure sets a minimum standard for a response to unexpected deaths in infancy and childhood. It describes the process of communication, collaborative action and information sharing following the unexpected death of a child.

The PRUDiC applies to all unexpected deaths in children from birth until their 18th birthday, whether from natural, unnatural, known or unknown causes, at home, in hospital or in the community. This includes road traffic collisions, apparent suicides and murders. This does not include stillbirths and the death of pre-viable babies born before 24 weeks.

Outcome focused: These are realistic and agreed goals that the person accessing services or provision and their key worker, can work towards. They are usually based around supporting the person's well-being. Outcomes will vary from person to person and child to child because they're about what matters to that individual.

Strengths-based: A strengths-based approach looks at – in a collaborative and child or person-centred way – the person's abilities and circumstances. You need to get a full picture of their life, so it's important to engage and work with others, such as other agencies and the person's network, with the appropriate consent.

Two-stage capacity test: The Mental Capacity Act (MCA) is designed to protect and empower people who may lack the mental capacity to make their own decisions about their care and treatment. It applies to people aged 16 and over.

It covers decisions about day-to-day things, such as what to wear or what to buy for the weekly shop, or serious life-changing decisions, such as whether to move into a care home or have major surgery.

The MCA sets out a two-stage test of capacity:

1. Does the person have a mind or brain impairment as a result of an illness, or external factors such as alcohol or drug use?
2. Does the impairment mean the person is unable to make a specific decision when they need to? People can lack capacity to make some decisions but have capacity to make others. Mental capacity can also fluctuate with time – someone may lack capacity at one point in time but may be able to make the same decision at a later point in time.

Whistleblowing: This is the term often used when someone who works for an organisation wants to raise a concern in the public interest with someone in authority. It's usually about wrongdoing, such as fraud, public safety, safeguarding, malpractice, danger, illegality or covering up these issues.

When you 'blow the whistle', you raise concerns and report suspected wrongdoing or dangers in relation to your organisation, staff or the services provided for local communities. This includes:

- criminal activity
- failure to comply with any legal or professional obligation or regulatory requirements
- miscarriages of justice
- danger to health and safety
- damage to the environment
- deliberately covering up any of the above.

This may help you understand the types of issues that may be raised (but it's not a full list):

- the abuse of children or vulnerable adults (physical, sexual or emotional)
- breaking policies and procedures, including the standing orders, financial procedures and employee code of conduct
- conduct and behaviour likely to damage your organisation's reputation or financial well-being, such as corrupt or irregular use of public money or resources

- failing to protect personal and sensitive information (data protection)
- providing poor value for money
- releasing confidential information without authorisation
- serious negligence and mismanagement
- abuse of power
- a miscarriage of justice
- fraud and corruption, for example, giving or receiving something as a bribe.

Frequently asked questions about the standards

We've collected the most frequently asked questions about the national safeguarding training, learning and development standards on this page.

First published: 23 January 2023

We've collected the most frequently asked questions about the national safeguarding training, learning and development standards on this page.

We'll update this page regularly with any other questions we get.

Why's it important to have a standardised approach to safeguarding learning and development?

Having these standards:

- gives assurance to organisations that all practitioners and volunteers have the same level of learning and development when moving from one organisation to another in Wales
- improves multi-agency learning and development
- provides a common language and encourages organisations and practitioners to work together
- helps organisations and commissioners make sure organisations are complying with the standards.

How can I use the standards in my organisation?

You can use the standards to plan and inform learning and development opportunities and to support multi-disciplinary learning.

Education institutes, such as universities, further education colleges and schools, can use the standards to provide a clear structure to safeguarding learning and development.

All organisations (public services, third and independent sector) can also use them to produce reports about safeguarding practice and performance.

What's the purpose of the standards? What do we do with them?

The purpose of these standards is to make sure everyone in Wales gets consistent and good quality safeguarding learning and development. Because this learning and development is relevant to their role and responsibilities, they'll be able to safeguard people to the best of their ability. This will also give assurance to the Regional Safeguarding Boards.

The standards will help organisations make sure:

- the child or adult's safety and well-being is at the centre of their work
- practitioners can work in empowering and enabling ways
- they incorporate the standards into their safeguarding policies and procedures
- practitioners know what group they're in and understand their responsibilities as part of that group, and how to follow the policies and procedures that are relevant to them
- all practitioners have access to and comply with the Wales Safeguarding Procedures
- their training needs analysis is focused, and learning and development opportunities give practitioners the skills they need to make early

- identification and reporting of safeguarding matters more likely
- practitioners have the support they need to be skilled and confident, and there are processes in place to look after their well-being
 - there's a safer community for everyone with all the agencies working together.

Why do the safeguarding standards have groups not levels?

The development group chose the term 'groups' to sort practitioners by their roles and responsibilities. This means organisations and practitioners can use the standards flexibly because for some roles, practitioners will need to have the knowledge and skills from a different group.

The 'groups' in the standards match the 'levels' set out in NHS Roles and Competencies for Healthcare Staff. For example, Group A is the same as Level 1.

What are the benefits of the standards?

The standards make sure the design, content and provision of safeguarding training, learning and development across Wales is consistent.

The standards clearly set out what appropriate content for safeguarding training, learning and development for practitioners in Wales should look like.

Where possible, training, learning and development should be multi-agency. This will help develop awareness of each practitioner's role in early intervention and prevention work and in the safeguarding process.

What were the challenges in developing the standards? How did you overcome them?

The language used was a challenge. Our discussions focused on 'levels' versus 'groups', with 'levels' guided by what was used in the health sector.

Equal voices and opportunities were seen as a challenge to begin with, but they were crucial to developing the standards. All the organisations involved had to understand and respect each other's needs and this shared empathy benefited the standards' development. It was also important everyone understood the voluntary sector's role in the safeguarding process.

By having discussions, working together and understanding each other's needs, the development group was able to see each other's points of view and think about what the standards and framework meant for each organisation and sector. This allowed us to create common safeguarding learning and development standards and a training, learning and development framework.

Everyone involved now feels the standards and framework are relevant to their organisation and sector – they speak and belong to all. This is the real achievement!

What are the challenges in putting the standards into practice?

The challenge will be who will develop the training, learning and development that must follow the standards and framework, and who will provide that training. Paying for it will also be a challenge. Training, learning and development needs investment and staff will need time off to attend and/or provide the training.

Putting timescales around the development and implementation of the standards and framework is also challenging, to make sure every organisation, practitioner and volunteer reach similar milestones at the same time. The standards and framework will need buy-in from everyone, and for everyone to feel they apply to them.

Other challenges include the perceived fear of safeguarding, and “Is this my responsibility?” “Does this have my name on it?” The standards place responsibility on certain practitioners to understand and apply safeguarding procedures when this may not have been something they expected to do.

Do I have to use the standards when thinking about or running safeguarding training?

Every area of the social and health care sector was involved in the development of the standards, so organisations are expected to voluntarily comply with them.

The Regional Safeguarding Boards own the standards and framework, and this places a clear expectation on all organisations to comply with the standards.

All statutory partners and other related organisations will be expected to apply the standards and the framework when carrying out their roles.

What's the role of the Regional Safeguarding Boards in putting the standards into practice?

Every Regional Safeguarding Board was involved in developing the standards. The regional safeguarding board partners own the standards and framework.

They will:

- adopt the standards and include them in regional safeguarding policies and processes
- reinforce how the standards should be used to design, develop, deliver, monitor and evaluate training, learning and development
- encourage use of the standards and framework to set clear expectations for providers of training, learning and development
- be responsible for identifying appropriate, confident, qualified and experienced trainers to provide the learning programmes.

Who will monitor and review the standards? How often will this happen?

The Safeguarding Standards Review Group will be set up in early 2023. It will monitor and review how the standards are put into practice. The group will include some members of the development group, as well as new members.

The standards will be reviewed every three months after their launch – in April, July and October 2023 and in January 2024.

When will the safeguarding training, learning and development framework be available?

It will be published in early 2023. It won't have a formal launch, but we'll let everyone know when it's published.

Will the safeguarding training be accredited, and if so, how? How's the training quality assured?

At the moment, the standards and framework haven't been accredited or quality assured.

The Safeguarding Standards Review Group will look into this.

What are the timescales for completing training and refresher training?

We don't have any agreed timescales yet. Agreed timescales will be in the framework and available in early 2023.

Have you thought about the confusion the standards could cause with existing training that uses the terms 'levels' rather than 'groups'?

Organisations can still use their existing terms, but they must show how their training, learning and development match those set out in the standards. The standards build on and strengthen existing groups and levels.

Who's responsible for finding appropriately confident/qualified/experienced trainers to deliver the training, particularly for groups C, D, E and F?

Each Regional Safeguarding Board will be responsible for identifying appropriate, confident, qualified and experienced trainers to provide the learning programmes.

The Regional Safeguarding Boards may choose to use the standards to help them find the best trainers to run safeguarding programmes to make sure practitioners are safe and effective in their role.

How will issues of accessing training, learning and development be considered?

The framework will have clear guidance for minimum training time, and it has been created with sector colleagues to reflect pressures of staff release. It is hoped that it is achievable for all organisations.

The framework and feedback will be reviewed by the Standards Review Group throughout 2023.
